Customer Reviews

Francine Rivers second title in the Mark of the Lion series delivers a pleasant surprise. The saga begun in "A Voice in the Wind" takes a dramatic and dark twist in "Echo in the Darkness". It stands in sharp contrast to the first book and shines in its own right. The characters we met in the first novel are developed a great deal in the second novel and we get down to some of the deeper issues motivating these people. Almost non-existent is the frivolous debauchery seen in the first novel. In the first book Ms. Rivers lays a groundwork of the lives the main characters are enmeshed in. Here, in the second book we see the tragic consequences of those actions. We see the ravages of promiscuity, the hopelessness of idol worship, and the sobering effects of the apathy of a society that is crumbling under the weight of its own debauchery. You can't help but see parallels to the present day. This novel, more so than the first, will make you think and examine your own walk with the Lord. The pace is breathless, be prepared to have difficulty closing the book. I ended up taking it with me to work and reading on my breaks, I couldn't tear myself away from the story. I read the last 100 pages in one sitting ending well past 3 AM. As far as Christian fiction goes it's sometimes like navigating a mine-field, you pick up a novel not knowing what the author's theology may be and what you're about to be exposed to. In this novel, Ms. Rivers has done a remarkable job of presenting what true Christian faith is all about. She shows various people from all walks of life coming to know the Lord. Ms. Rivers' novel shows us that the wages of sin indeed are death, but that no matter what, God loves us, and through redemption in Christ, there is life and that nothing is impossible with Christ.
